

Accountability and stewardship reporting

In 1997, the province came out with a forest management strategy document known as the Alberta Forest Legacy. One of the principles embodied within this document is the concept of adaptive management. In short, it deals with the notion of continual improvement of knowledge and the creative flexibility to incorporate this knowledge into management practices.

Consistent with the Alberta Forest Legacy, Spray Lake Sawmills has included a monitoring and stewardship reporting component to the Forest Management Agreement (FMA). This will act as the foundation for adaptive management as well as a public accountability document on how well the company is fulfilling its mandate.
